

Title: SENIOR/PRINCIPAL ECONOMIST

Location: New Delhi, India

Gross Salary: $120-150K

Start Date: March 1, 2007

Established in 1999 by The World Bank, the Global Development Network (GDN) is an ever-expanding worldwide association of research institutes dedicated to generating, sharing and applying knowledge in the social sciences for the purpose of development. Based in New Delhi, GDN is now an independent organization and will shortly assume the legal status on an International Organization.

The Senior/Principal Economist must be an experienced researcher committed to building research capacity in developing and transition countries.

The Senior/Principal Economist reports to the President and is responsible for:

- Program management: Initiating, implementing, and monitoring research capacity-building programs in interaction with regional networks
- Publication: Editing and otherwise preparing GDN supported research output for publication and promoting GDN in the development community
- Planning: Serving as a member of the Planning Team and advising the President
- Supervision: Guiding junior staff and interns.
- Evaluation: Contributing to ongoing efforts to monitor and evaluate GDN's capacity-building programs
- Resource mobilization: Assisting the President with fund-raising from official and private sources

To view a full job description, see <http://www.gdnet.org/opportunities>. Applications including an up-to-date CV, a brief letter of motivation, and the names of three references should be sent to at applications@gdnet.org by November 30, 2006.